Does being colour blind mean you only see in black and white?

Not exactly. People who are colour blind just can’t see things in as many colours as people who have normal vision, and they cannot see certain colours like red, green, and some blues. Not all colour-blind people see colour the same way, either.

FAQs – Corneal Transplantation Surgery

Q. Donor corneas... where do they come from?
A. “Donor” refers to the person who provides the cornea after death.

Q. Who performs the corneal transplant surgery?
A. Only a corneal surgeon who is trained for corneal transplants can perform the surgery.

Q. Do corneal transplants guarantee sight to all blind people?
A. No. Transplants only help when the loss of sight is solely due to a corneal defect and the rest of the eye’s mechanism is intact.

Real stories. Real people.

“My mother is a diabetic and a blood pressure patient. I sent an email to 12 famous eye specialists of Mumbai. I got just a single reply which was from Shroff Eye. She got admitted for her surgery at 08:45 am, entered in the operation complex by 10:00 am and came out healthy and happily at 10:15 am. AMAZING! During the treatment, hospitality, surgery, appointments, accounts procedures and all other communication we feel we are not in India. The infrastructure and environment along with the extraordinary hospitality made it a pleasant treatment.

Shroffs are THE BEST. We were lucky to get a professional eye clinic. My mother is in best of hands and soon she will have ‘Opened her eyes to a whole new World!’
